Are Dogs Really Our Friends or Not?

Nowadays, many people keep dogs at home rather than keeping children. They are busy with work and only have a little leisure time. Most of all, they think dogs are their true friends.

Firstly, dogs are our entertaining partner. When we feel bored, they may do some tricks which are hilarious to make us laugh. They can also chat with us with their facial expressions and barks. We can share our unhappy things with them to release our pressure. They are the ones who always stay beside us and keep our secrets forever.

Furthermore, dogs can help us find our things or way. As dogs have a strong sense of smell, they can remember our smell and help us to find our things easily. On the other hand, when we lose our way accidentally, a dog can memorise the road that you have just walked and lead you back home. Therefore, dogs are really good helpers.

In addition, dogs are our brave heroes. When we are in danger, they lend us a helping hand and always save us when we are in need. If a thief steals our things, a dog will help us to chase him and help its master to take them back with its bravery.

In my opinion, dogs are really our friends. Although they may sometimes hurt us by their scratches, they are very brave and willing to listen to our problems. Try to take good care of them and discover their strengths!
